

Questionnaire results from SAIC students

This questionnaire was distributed to 60 current SAIC students and received 58 valid responses. The following information reflects the results of the questionnaire:

Interviews:

--" The museum is too big, and it's too hard to find a particular exhibit. I spend most of my time inside AIC looking for pieces I want to work on. Then observe them for 10 minutes and take notes, then go online or to the library for more information. The museum doesn't allow pens other than pencils to be used to take notes, it's very inconvenient, and my notes get scuffed up easily."

Age: 20
Hometown: Beijing
Year: Sophomore
Major: Oil Painting

--"Most of the sculptures looks similar, even the names on the cards were the same, and the lack of detailed historical background caused me to fill out the teacher's form and not be able to answer the basic questions."

Name: Amanda
Age: 23
Hometown: Nanjing
Year: Senior
Major: Fashion

---" Paper maps are really inconvenient and only tell you which galleries are where and where the famous paintings are, after all, they are for tourists? Understandable, just not for us students. And a lot of times when you ask the staff, they don't know exactly what exhibits are where. I'm not sure if I'll be able to find it next time I go."

---" The info card has very little information on it. There's not much information on the info card, other than who painted it and when. It would be nice if there was a place for more background information. It would give me something to start."

Findings though Affinity Diagram:

- Information and Content Issues:

 - Lack of Information
Interviewees express a need for more background information on artworks and resources.
- Unclear Information
Identical names on description cards for some cultural relics, causing confusion when differentiating between artworks.
 - Trouble on Documentation
Pencil notes are easily rubbed away, Image text takes time to integrate after visit
- Categorization and Navigation Issues:

 - Difficulty Finding Artwork
Students find it challenging to locate specific artworks or resources within the museum.
 - Limited App Functionality
The official guide app is only helpful when visitors are physically present at the museum.
 - Inadequate Information on Description Cards
Description cards lack sufficient information, making it hard to focus research efforts.
 - Inaccessible Resources
Difficulty in accessing articles or books in the library when they are listed as available.
